Norm the General Gallagher moves to take NSW with a little help from some friends

By John Gorman

As the New South Wales election draws to a close, the political landscape is becoming increasingly clear. The Liberal Party, led by John Howard, is the favourite to win, but the Labor Party, led by Bob Carr, is also a strong contender. The election is expected to be a close one, with the outcome likely to be decided in the final weeks of the campaign.

Norm the General Gallagher, a prominent figure in the Labor Party, is expected to play a key role in the campaign. He is known for his fiery speeches and his ability to connect with voters. His move to take NSW is seen as a significant challenge to the Liberal Party's dominance in the state.

Gallagher's move is supported by a coalition of friends, including several members of the Labor Party and independent MPs. They believe that Gallagher's leadership is needed to bring about a change in government. The coalition is expected to be a formidable force in the upcoming election.

The Liberal Party, on the other hand, is confident that they will win the election. They have a strong record of economic growth and low unemployment. They believe that their policies are the best for the state, and they are confident that they will win the support of the voters.

A group of people, including men and women, sitting on the ground and looking at a large map or document spread out before them. They appear to be in a public space, possibly a park or a large hall, and are engaged in a discussion or a meeting.

The need to stop breeding

I have just read the article in the Digger about the need to stop breeding. It is a very important issue, and one that needs to be addressed as soon as possible. The article discusses the impact of breeding on the environment and the need to take action to protect it. It is a call to action for all of us to do our part in protecting the planet.

The article also discusses the need to stop breeding in the context of the current economic situation. It argues that breeding is a costly and wasteful activity, and that it is time to stop it. It calls for a change in the way we think about breeding, and for a focus on sustainable living.

I agree with the article's message. Breeding is a major contributor to environmental degradation, and it is time to stop it. We need to focus on reducing our carbon footprint and on protecting the natural world. Breeding is a luxury that we can no longer afford.

The article also discusses the need to stop breeding in the context of the current economic situation. It argues that breeding is a costly and wasteful activity, and that it is time to stop it. It calls for a change in the way we think about breeding, and for a focus on sustainable living.

Management in business has an ethical dimension. It is not only the right or wrong of things, but also the right or wrong of people. Management is a social activity.

Business ethics concerns questions of right and wrong, good and bad, just and unjust, fair and unfair, honest and dishonest, and so on. It is the study of the moral principles that govern the behavior of individuals and organizations in the business world.

Business ethics is a branch of applied ethics, which is the study of the moral principles that govern the behavior of individuals and organizations in a particular field of activity.
